May God bless you and keep you always.

May your wishes all come true.

May you always do for others, and let others do for you.

May you build a ladder to the skies,

And climb on every rung.

And may you stay forever young.

Stritch School of Medicine: an H&P...

Loyola University of Chicago was founded in 1870. Recognizing the need for a strong medical school, Loyola affiliated itself with Illinois Medical College in 1909 and with Bennet and Reliance Medical Colleges the following year. In 1915, control of this loose organization passed to the University trustees and became the Loyola University School of Medicine.

A home for Loyola's medical school was chosen in 1917 with the purchase of the old Chicago College of Medicine and Surgery building on South Walcott Avenue across the street from Cook County Hospital.

Loyola's efforts to improve its medical school facilities were limited by a lack of funds until the late 1940s when Samuel Cardinal Stritch lent his name to an annual fund-raising dinner that has become the main source of continuous financial support for the medical school. In his honor, Loyola renamed its medical school: the Stritch School of Medicine.

Several sites were considered before the University decided to build its medical center in Maywood adjacent to the Hines Veterans Administration Hospital. Official construction of the Loyola University Medical Center began in 1965 and by 1969 the new medical school was in operation.

As demand for medical care has grown, Loyola has risen to the challenge. The first patients walked through the doors of the new Mulcahy Outpatient Center in 1981. In 1986 a new nine-story building, the Russo Surgical Pavilion was added to the medical complex. That same year, Loyola was designated as a Level 1 Trauma Center for the State of Illinois. Two years later, the Lifestar Helicopter Emergency Medical System became operational. This was followed by the completion of Loyola's state-of-the-art Emergency Care Facility in 1991.

The 125,000 square-foot Cancer Center opened in 1994 and was later renamed the Cardinal Bernadin Cancer Center in 1996 in honor of the late Joseph Cardinal Bernadin who received his medical care at Loyola University Medical Center. The new Stritch School of Medicine building opened in August of 1997 at the cost of more than $45 million. By November, the new school was joined by the Loyola University Center for Health and Fitness.

The continuous growth and improvement of the Loyola University Medical Center has resulted in the fulfillment of Samuel Cardinal Stritch's dream: the creation of a major Catholic medical center dedicated to serving the ever changing needs of the community.

I speak of journeys because of course we are all on journeys ourselves. The comparison of life to a road is a very ancient one, and you and I are travelers along that road whether we think of it that way or not, traveling from the unknown into the unknown... When we are on a journey, what is real is not so much the role we play, the mask we wear, in the place that we are leaving, and not even the roles we will soon be called on to play when we get to the place where we are going. Instead, what becomes increasingly real as we travel along is something much closer to the actual face that lies behind all the masks and that gives a kind of relative unity to all the different parts that our life demands that we play. In other words, travel can be a very unmasking experience, bringing us suddenly face to face with ourselves - as when we are gazing out of a train window at the endless line of telegraph poles whipping by, and we find that part of what we are looking at is our own reflection. -- Unknown

DREAM BIG

If there were ever a time to care,
to make a difference,
to embark on something worth doing,
it is now.

Not for any grand cause necessarily-- but for something that tugs at your heart,
something that's your aspiration,
something that is your dream.

You owe it to yourself
to make your days here count.

Have fun.

Dig deep.

Stretch.

Dream Big.

Know though that things worth doing
seldom come easy.

There will be good days,
and there will be bad days.

There will be times when you want to turn around,

pack it up,

and call it quits.

Those times tell you
that you are pushing yourself,

that you are not afraid to learn by trying.

Persist.

Because with an idea,

determination,

and the right tools,

you can do great things.

Let your intellect,

and your heart guide you.

Trust.

Believe in the incredible power of the human mind.

Of something that makes a difference.

Of working hard.

Of laughing and hoping.

Of lazy afternoons.

Of lasting friendships.

Of all the things that will cross your path this year.

The start of something new brings hope of something great.

Anything is possible.

There is only one you.

You will pass this way only once.

Do it right.

To laugh often and much;
To win the respect of intelligent people
and the affection of children;
To earn the appreciation of honest critics
and endure the betrayal of false friends;
To appreciate beauty;
To find the best in others;
To leave the world a bit better,
whether by a healthy child,
a redeemed social condition,
or a job well done;
To know even one life has breathed easier
Because you have lived:
This is to have succeeded. -Ralph Waldo Emerson

A WINNER'S CREED

If you think you are beaten, you are;
If you think you dare not, you don't;
If you'd like to win, but think you can't,
It's almost a cinch you won't.

If you think you'll lose, you're lost;
For out in the world we find
Success begins with a person's faith;
It's all in the state of mind.

Life's battles don't always go
to the stronger or faster hand;
They go to the one who trusts
in God and always thinks "I CAN."

May 31, 1987 - Yosemite CA - 12 1/2 years

DEAR KEITH,

When I snapped this photo of you in May '87, instead of "say cheese" I asked you to show me your soul. I admit it is one of my favorite photos of you. Pride in building your first campfire and finding joy in a most unusual camping trip in Yosemite, gave us as a family an increased respect for you.

May your patients see the beauty of your soul, find joy in their dealing with you even in unusual situations and develop a deep respect for you. May God be with you, now and forever!

The Caduceus staff would like to extend our heartfelt gratitude to the many people who helped us put this book together.

Thanks . . .

To our advisor Dean Michael Lambesis for effectively screening the photos and keeping us on track.

To Phyllis Curran & Toni Birch for collecting photos and putting up with all of our antics.

To Christine Wonka for providing the technical support and working with us.

To Oscar Izquierdo and Medical Photography for the many photos of departments and our campus.

. . . and to all of our classmates for putting up with copious amounts of e-mail and for sharing so many of the wonderful photographs you've collected over the past four years.

The Loyola Stritch Class of 2000 would also like to thank the following departments for their continued support of the Caduceus.

St. Cuke the Beloved Physician

Stained Glass Window located in the lobby of the medical school

The central figure is St. Cuke, the patron saint of medicine. His robe is green, the symbolic color of both life and medicine. The red heart in the center of his chest not only represents God's love and love for others, but also symbolizes biology and physiology. The red staff of Aesculapius in his left hand is an ancient Greek and Roman symbol of healing. The figure's prominent hands symbolize caring for others, community and society through public health initiative. St. Cuke is walking down a yellow gravel path that represents the golden path of life.

St. Cuke's eyes direct the viewer to panels on the left which are comprised of symbols of core clinical and basic science disciplines. These include a mortar and pestle representing pharmacology and pharmacy, the Greek word "hygia" symbolizing public health and hygiene, a scalpel for surgery, forceps for obstetrics and gynecology, a tube used as an early stethoscope for medicine, a genderless face with "Rx" and male and female symbols for psychiatry and the behavioral sciences, a flask of ether for both biochemistry and the major advances in the medical sciences, a skull representing anatomy, a book as a source of knowledge with "DNA," the basic unit of life and "PCN" (penicillin), one of the major advances in the fight against infection.

The window also includes 3 larger panels to the right of St. Cuke. The first depicts Mother Cabrini, a member of a local Chicago order of nuns who was the founder of the first Catholic hospital and a saint who dedicated her life to the sick and poor. The second features a genderless face peering into a microscope. The microscope is a symbol of pathology, microbiology, and science. The face represents a medical student in his or her quest to master disease. The third panel depicts Mother Theresa, a woman who spent her life caring for the sick and poor, holding an infant as a symbol of pediatrics.

Finally, there are a variety of other symbols in the central panel including two flowers. The pink flower on the right is foxglove, the source of digitalis. The red flower on the left is a poppy, the source of opium and morphine. The words "Primum non nocere" translate to "First do no harm," the first rule of medicine which dates back to the time of Hippocrates. "Honora medicum a Deo enim omnis medela," a quotation from the Old Testament states that one is to honor the physician because he or she derives wisdom from God. Finally, the name of "Raphael" the archangel appears in association with the winged serpent Caduceus, the guardian of science and knowledge. In Hebrew this name means "healer of God." It is also the baptismal name of Dr. Ralph P. Leischner who worked with the artist, David Lee Csicsko, in the design of this window.
